

GIZOO HELPS BRITISH SLEEPERS WAKE UP FOR SUMMERTIME

Don't worry about sleeping in with these fabulous clocks

Gizoo (www.gizoo.co.uk), the online retailer of gadgets, gifts and gizmos, knows how hard it will be to lose an hour's sleep when the clocks go forward on Sunday. Invest in one of these funky clocks and you can sleep easy knowing you won't be late for work....

Flying Alarm Clock – £19.95. The only way to stop the alarm with this relentless chap is to return the flying propeller to the base unit, by which time you will be wide awake. All the usual features of a modern digital alarm clock are included, such as a snooze function, and the digital display has a soft blue back light. In short, this infuriating, but undeniably cool Flying Alarm Clock, is a must-have for anyone who struggles to get up in the morning. See the Flying Alarm Clock here.

Clocky – £21.95. Using all the standard settings, you can set the clock and alarm on Clocky as usual, but just wait for the result! Once it's time and the alarm begins to sound, Clocky flies off your bedside table and scampers around your bedroom floor until you've kicked off the covers, discovered its hiding place and turned it off manually. Genius. Visit Gizoo's Clocky page for more information and pictures.

Sonic Bomb Alarm Clock – £29.95. Heavy sleepers, listen up! This is the alarm clock for you. Loud enough to wake even the heaviest sleepers and the hard of hearing, this ferociously loud digital clock has a fully adjustable tone and volume, which you can crank up to an earth-shattering 113db. Place your new noisy friend underneath your pillow, and if you sleep through the noise, its vibrations will wake you up. Check out the Sonic Bomb's page now.

Nobby Voice Recognition Clock – £17.95. This little alien uses artificial intelligence to respond to your voice and he'll reply to six of your questions or commands with some cheeky backchat! You can use Nobby as an alarm either by setting him manually, like a normal alarm clock, or by switching him to voice recognition mode. Tell him the time you want your alarm to go off and he'll even repeat it back to you to confirm – just say the word, and he'll obey! Find out more about Nobby here.

Mood Clock – £7.95. Let's face it, no-one likes getting up early. But that could be all about to change thanks to the Mood Clock. This charming little cube gives off a warming glow and cycles through a range of different relaxing shades. Should you wake up in the pitch black needing to know the time, a quick tap on the top of the mood clock will cause it to light up for a few seconds without interrupting your sleep. “Getting out of your warm bed on a cold day is never fun, so when the clocks go forward this weekend make sure you’re prepared to spring into action every morning with one of our fantastic clocks,” says Gizoo’s Managing Director, Gary Bates.

End.
